

Online Intelligence Databases

Open Source Intelligence Second to None!

Search any of the 3 Intelligence databases for strategic, political and economic intelligence information as you do research and write your papers.

AsiaInt.com The Asia Intelligence Service

Established in 2000, the Asia Intelligence Service provides a comprehensive online information resource for all those with business, investment, or political/strategic interests in Asia. In addition to the huge amount of open-source intelligence that AsiaInt gathers, absorbs, and analyses every day, there are daily dispatches from sources in almost every country of Asia. One of AsiaInt's distinguishing features is the fact that it does not generally use journalists as sources or analysts. Most often its key contributors are high government officials, leading academics, and well-placed businessmen working closely with in-house analysts.

Latinnews.com Latin American Newsletters

Established in 1967, Latin American Newsletters (LAN) provides comprehensive political and economic analysis on over 30 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean. LAN's comprehensive range of print and online resources offers a reliable, accurate and timely source of insight into key events that shape this region.

CourcyInt.com Courcy's Intelligence Service

Courcy's Intelligence Service was created in 1934 to provide major international corporations with strategic, political, and economic-risk intelligence in the turbulent years leading up to World War II, and for almost 70 years now Courcy's Intelligence Service has been providing an early warning service for multi-national businesses, governments, and international investors alike.
